

I was born and raised in Willowick, Ohio, the youngest of three siblings. My father immigrated here to America from Syria, so I grew up eating great hummus and Middle Eastern foods. I attended Cleveland State University, but was soon bored living at home with my parents, so I decided to join the Navy and travel the world.

After my naval service, I moved back home to Ohio and soon met my husband, Brian on a blind date at a pizza shop, and we married in 2006. We have two very spoiled dogs named Buster and Bailey, we have rescued a total of five dogs, and we plan to rescue a lot more.

I completed my degree at Cleveland State University and I have many years in the cosmetics industry as an account executive, makeup artist, and a brand trainer. I received my aesthetics license in 2019, and I currently work for Neutrogena in sales and business development.

We live in Chesterland, Ohio and I enjoy traveling, hiking with my dogs, going to wine tastings, yoga, and cooking.
